A BILL FOR AN ACT

1 Relating to higher education faculty; and appropriating money.

2 Whereas after two decades of replacing full-time faculty positions with positions that are temporary or part-time, higher education nationally has reached the point where more than 70 percent of all college and university instructors are part-time or temporary, more than twice the national workforce average of 30 percent; and

3 Whereas this trend makes higher education one of the most extreme examples nationwide of the trend toward decreasing job security and benefits; and

4 Whereas state support for public colleges and universities, on a per student basis, is declining, as is the proportion of state budgets devoted to public higher education and the purchasing power of federal student aid grants; and

5 Whereas the effect on students of the lack of government support and the decline of the full-time faculty workforce is becoming apparent; and

6 Whereas college costs are rising much faster than family income; and

7 Whereas among the 30 member nations of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the United States now ranks just seventh in the percentage of citizens who enter post-secondary education and complete a bachelor's or higher degree; and

8 Whereas the effect is disproportionate on poor students and students of color, the gap between affluent and low-income students is widening, and affluent students with the lowest test scores have as good a chance of attending college as the lowest-income students with the highest grades; and

9 Whereas a faculty corps consisting primarily of full-time tenured or tenure-track positions is essential because, just as in other professional fields, full-time commitment and professional treatment result in better service to students, and ultimately to taxpayers, and because tenure protects the academic freedom essential for teaching and high-level research; and

10 Whereas many colleges and universities have survived during the past decades of shrinking government support only because of the underpaid work of part-time faculty and full-time... nontenure-track faculty; and

Whereas part-time or temporary faculty who, on many college campuses, now teach more than half the courses offered each academic semester must be treated professionally, paid fairly and recognized for their commitment to higher education even in the face of their own economic exploitation; and

Whereas the dearth of full-time positions has meant that the full-time faculty who remain are increasingly less able to devote the time they need to their research and teaching because they have an increased share of the responsibility for student advising, college governance and curriculum development; and

Whereas the shrinking percentage of full-time faculty positions has also placed increased burdens on other academic staff, whose workloads have risen as the number of full-time college and university professionals has declined; and

Whereas with fewer than 30 percent of faculty nationwide in full-time tenure and tenure-track positions, the number of faculty who are institutionally supported to conduct research has declined dramatically, and the future of university-based research in the United States is now in danger; and

Whereas academic quality is impaired when the majority of faculty members are denied the resources and professional autonomy they need to do their best work; and

Whereas so long as part-time or adjunct faculty have to teach at multiple institutions to earn a living, so long as they have to worry about obtaining health and pension benefits, so long as they are hired under less than professional conditions, so long as evaluation of their work is cursory or nonexistent, so long as they lack office space and basic professional support, so long as they are unable to participate in college governance and so long as they are the academic equivalent of piece workers, the quality of education, research and community service offered by American colleges and universities will suffer; and

Whereas American higher education now appears to be at a crossroads, a time when the achievements of the past have been put at risk by the employment policies of the present; now, therefore,

Be It Enacted by the People of the State of Oregon:

If, during a 12-month calendar year, a part-time or other nontenure-track faculty member teaches at multiple community colleges or state institutions of higher education and in aggregate teaches 50 percent or more of an established teaching load, that faculty member shall receive credit toward the retirement plan available to tenured and tenure-track faculty.

and nontenure-track faculty salaries by a sufficient amount to meet the requirements of section 4 of this 2007 Act prior to the beginning of the fall semester of 2013. Each academic year, the gap between part-time salary and comparable pro rata full-time salary in any aca-
